

New Program Creation: Questions for Consideration

Are there any new resources needed for this program?

No. This program will be conducted entirely online using existing resources (like Canvas). No equipment, labs, or classrooms are necessary, and specialized faculty would not need to be hired.

What is the anticipated student interest?

While distance learning has been a growing field, the current pandemic has rapidly increased the need for quality online instruction. It is anticipated that this program will be of high interest to educators and school districts at all levels, as well as instructors and trainers from business and industry sectors. This seems like a very timely program to offer right now.

Are there any resources needed to help students learn about this new program

No resources are needed, as the KCI has a strong outreach and marketing presence with local K-12 schools and districts, but assistance with marketing would always be appreciated.

Does De Anza offer a similar program?

No, De Anza does not offer a similar program.
